

Advancing Treatment, Improving Care

The American Society of Nephrology (ASN) and the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) have created the Kidney Health Initiative (KHI). This partnership advances scientific understanding of the patient safety and treatment implications of new and existing medical products.

This collaborative environment for all stakeholders in the kidney community fosters development of optimum therapies for diseases that affect the kidney and the quality of life of millions of people in the United States and the rest of the world.

“In today’s complex world of new product development, establishing a deeper knowledge of disease states and forging multi-disciplinary collaborations have become essential to finding safe and effective new therapies. The Kidney Health Initiative is a powerful example of this successful formula and demonstrates our shared commitment to improving the health and safety of patients with kidney disease.”
